

londonismyoyster

June 14, 2011

The Southbank Centre Roof Garden

Filed under: Uncategorized — Tags: Architecture, Art, Gardens, Illustration, London — londonismyoyster @ 7:33 pm

The Southbank Centre is 50 - to celebrate 90 variations of wildflowers cover it's concrete rooftops. Both view enhancing and sustainable, the flowers provide nectar for the bees from the hives on the Royal Festival Hall's roof.

Leave a Comment

June 6, 2011

My Favourite Tube Line...

Filed under: Uncategorized — Tags: Architecture, Art, Illustration, London, Transport — londonismyoyster @ 8:16 pm

...the East London Line. This isn't based on anything practical, like actually taking me anywhere I really need to go or TfL statistics on delays. I love the carriage interior - the 1970's orange and brown makes me feel at home, it reminds me of my parents living room when I was little. And the views - the Square Mile's skyline and glimpses of the East End's hidden corners. Brick Lane, Spitalfields City Farm and the gardens at the Geffrye Museum to name a few.

Leave a Comment

May 29, 2011

The Green Roof

Filed under: Uncategorized — Tags: Architecture, Art, Gardens, Illustration, London — londonismyoyster @ 11:01 pm

A wildflower meadow atop a roof in Islington. This picture was inspired by a National Geographic article. I love the idea of having a green roof - a little piece of the English countryside in central London, hidden from the city streets below.

Leave a Comment

- Enter your email address to subscribe to this blog and receive notifications of new posts by email.

Join 3 other followers

- Pages